

Forklift Safety

Training is to be provided to all new employees, regardless of experience, by a qualified industrial truck operator who has extensive knowledge and experience with not only the operation of the powered truck, but also the safety guidelines regarding the work environment. Training consists of both online training and hands-on training.

OSHA mandates that all powered industrial truck operators be re-evaluated and receive refresher training every three years.

Forklift Safety online training is available on the Environmental Health and Safety website.
